

The Importance of NHS Core Values

The Health Sciences undergraduate programmes at The University of Liverpool will prepare you for a future career in the health care industry. Many of you will ultimately work for the NHS and as a student you will undertake placements within the NHS.

The NHS expects that its workforce, including students, will hold values and attitudes that align with those of the NHS Constitution.

When you make an application to one of our programmes, your personal statement must show evidence that you are developing some of these values and attitudes.

Do you do voluntary work? Do you give up your time and energy for the benefit of others? Do you support or care for someone with specific health needs? Are you interested in what happens in your community?

These are just a few things that would suggest that you are developing a caring and compassionate nature which is a crucial aspect of being a healthcare professional.

Full details relating to the NHS core values can be found online here: www.hee.nhs.uk/about/our-values/nhs-constitutional-values-hub-0

Further information regarding our admissions policy, and some useful documents that may help with the application process, can be found here: www.liverpool.ac.uk/health-sciences/admissions/admissions-useful-information/

For general advice regarding personal statement writing, visit: www.ucas.com/undergraduate/applying-university/writing-personal-statement/how-write-personal-statement

Our Undergraduate Programmes:

- Diagnostic Radiography
- Nursing
- Occupational Therapy
- Orthoptics
- Physiotherapy
- Therapeutic Radiography and Oncology